To and From the Loop

The growth of any community depends upon fast, convenient, low-cost transportation. That is the kind of transportation the Chicago Aurora and Elgin Railroad provides, morning, mid-day, evening, night, between downtown Aurora and downtown Chicago and intermediate communities. Officially recognized as one of the world's fastest electric interurbans, it has been serving Aurora, and doing its part in the development of the City, for thirty-seven years.

The C.A.&E. has just completed a construction project that marks another big step forward in Aurora's march of progress. Starting Sunday morning, December 31, 1939, C.A.&E. trains will enter downtown Aurora over new private right-of-way, operating along the east bank of the Fox River to the new passenger platform on the river side of the new terminal station at 56 North Broadway, just north of New York Street, and operation on Broadway will be discontinued.

The passenger entrance to the trains will be through the new terminal station at 56 North Broadway, while an automobile driveway, a few doors north, leads from Broadway to the new passenger platform and the river side of the terminal.

Greater convenience to the public will be provided through the new facilities. The Chicago Aurora and Elgin offers you many travel advantages. Make use of them—
